Items Found During This Scenario

Deep Platinum Pendant: You recovered a curious pendant crafted from deep platinum, an exceptionally rare alloy of platinum extracted from the darkest ocean trenches. The substance is prized by aquatic creatures, and you gain a +2 bonus on Diplomacy checks made to influence creatures with the aquatic or water subtype. In addition, you gain a +5 bonus on saving throws to avoid pressure damage from deep water.

Growing Notoriety: Your actions have earned you a modicum of respect on the high seas, and you gain 5 points of Disrepute and 5 points of Infamy. Disrepute behaves in many ways like Prestige Points, allowing you to leverage your reputation to purchase a small number of boons; Prestige Points and Disrepute are not interchangeable unless otherwise noted. Infamy behaves in many ways like Fame, tracking the total number of Disrepute points that you have earned in your career, and you may use your Infamy instead of your Fame when determining the maximum gp value of items purchased from your faction. As you continue your adventures in the Shackles, your Disrepute and Infamy will grow, as will the ways in which you may spend Disrepute.

Get Up, You Dogs! (10 Disrepute): While on a waterborne vessel, you may cast mass cure light wounds as a cleric of your character level, though it may only be used to heal living targets, not harm undead. You may use this ability when not on a waterborne vessel by spending an additional 5 Disrepute.

Walk the Plank! (0 Disrepute): While on a waterborne vessel, you may execute a follower to gain temporary Disrepute equal to the number of Prestige Points that you used to purchase the follower vanity. These Disrepute points must be spent by the end of the scenario or are lost forever.
